

MKK ANNOUNCED AS THE OFFICIAL CLOTHING SUPPLIER TO THE PCA MASTERS

MKK Sports Ltd, the bespoke teamwear specialists from Sussex, was appointed the official clothing supplier to the PCA Masters last month.

The company signed a deal to supply technical cricket clothing for the next two years. The PCA is one of a growing number of high profile customers who MKK have impressed with their products and service. The technical teamwear business, run by Sussex seamer James Kirtley and his two business partners, also supply Sussex and Middlesex County Cricket Clubs.

Paul Prichard, senior executive at the PCA said: "The PCA is very pleased to have MKK as their official clothing supplier for the next two years. MKK Sports is one of the forerunners in specialist cricket clothing and to have the added expertise of director James Kirtley, who is also a member of the PCA is a real bonus. MKK delivers high quality garments and met all our needs in terms of producing our bespoke designs."

The first of fourteen games takes place on 18 May and MKK director Roger Myall said: "Our partnership with the PCA strengthens our credibility within the professional cricketing ranks. We hope to make strides in pushing our service capability into the corporate market and this latest deal with the PCA is testament to our professional service."

The MKK Sports range encompasses a varied range of technical teamwear solutions for all sports, including hockey, rugby and cricket.
